

LEGISLATORS TO DISCUSS RELIEF IN CONFERENCE

Governor Pinchot to Meet With House Ways and Means Committee

GOV. MAY COMPROMISE

Report Persists That Executive is Willing to Give and Take

By Leo V. Dolan
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
HARRISBURG, Nov. 23.—(INS)— Pennsylvania legislators returned to their labors in the extraordinary session today for the next twenty-four hours
will mark the success, failure or drastic revision of Gov. Gifford Pinchot's 15-phase plan for unemployment relief.

Even before the General Assembly
is called to order at 9 o'clock tonight,
fate of the Governor's program is expected to be foreshadowed at conferences the Executive will hold with the full membership of the House Ways and Means Committee and with chairmen of all committees of the lower branch. The conferences admittedly have for their purpose the "selling"
of the Governor's plans to the House.

Strong reports continued to be heard that Governor Pinchot is prepared to compromise on his gasolinelilboard-cigarete tax measures rather than have the entire program wrecked. There was no confirmation whatever of the reports. The Governor's last word on the subject was that he had not receded from his original program.

Today's conferences, called by the Governor without consulting department heads, are expected to provide an answer to Pinchot critics who have contended the State Treasury is bursting with unused funds and huge taxation which could be utilized for unemployment relief thus obviating the necessity for the taxation program.

Administration backers claim that such critics were misled by the fact that the State Treasury began the month with a balance of $63,000,000 in all funds, of which $40,000,000 was in the general fund.

The Pinchot adherents point out that the budget for the biennium as submitted to the Legislature was prepared on the basis of $40,000,000 less in revenues than during the previous two year period. Instead of dropping off at the anticipated rate each month
the State's revenue now is falling off at $3,000,000 a month compared with the same period last year.

Should that rate of decrease continue or be accelerated the first biennium of the Pinchot administration would show a $32,000,000 deficit at its close. Administration backers declared that part of any funds raised through additional taxation would be needed to meet the situation which may face
the budget officers when the Legislature meets in its next regular session.

Administration foes busied themselves today in an attempt to discover to what extent the present administration has used funds, appropriated at the last session, to relieve unemployment. Records of the Auditor General's department disclosed that up until November 1, only $307,788 of the $12,970,100 appropriated for new work at State institutions had been expended.

Senate and House begin the third week of the special session tonight.
Three bills are on the House calendar while nine will occupy the attention of the Senate. Fireworks are expected in the Senate when the resolution of Senator Fay, Mercer, demanding explanation for the expenditure of only a fractional part of building and road construction appropriations, is called up.

C. E. UNION EXECUTIVES MEET AT RICHBORO

Supper for Recent Pastors'
Conference Cost $32,
It is Reported

QUESTIONNAIRES SENT

CHURCHVILLE, Nov. 23.—The executive board of the Bucks County
C. E. Union held a monthly meeting at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Harold Klein, Richboro. The treasurer, Roy H. Stout, reported that the supper for the Pastors' Conference had cost $32.
He also reported having received four
"Penny-a-Day Club" members and one "Dynamo" member. Publicity superintendent, Miss Miriam Tomlinson, asked that all the publicity chairmen in the local societies send reports of their activities to her to, in turn, be sent to the Christian Endeavor magazines. Mrs. Harold H. Klein, junior superintendent, reported that two new societies have been organized; one in Ivyland in charge of Mrs. Elmer Star-tler, and one in Morrisville in charge of Miss Helen Schofield.

During the month of September, questionnaires were sent out to every local society in the county. Caryl Booz, president, announced that these had all been filled out and returned.
He summarized them briefly in the following report: approximate membership in county, 371 active, 24 honorary, and 22 associate, making a total of 417; quiet hour members, 101;
tenth league, 56; C. E. World subscribers, 62; Keystone Endeavor subscribers, 38; subscribers to denominational papers, 42. The drive for members for the "Half-a-Buck for Bucks Club" is now under way. Morrisville society reported having fifteen members.

Herbert Weber, southeastern district secretary, was a guest at the meeting. He told about the Southeastern district meeting to be held at the Churchville Church on December 12th at 3 p. m. The county executive board will change their December meeting to this place and date, to meet at 2 o'clock. At 5:30 a supper will be served, which will be followed by conferences in charge of the state officers.

The following assistants were named for the various superintendents:
quiet hour assistants, William Scho-
field and N. Worthington; tenth league, Alfred France and Charles Wesson;
missionary, Miss Bertha Pickock; efficiency, Raymond Alburger, Harry White, Carl France and Clarence Gar-ganizing new societies in the many communities in Bucks county which

C. E. has not reached.

Summer-Like Weather Brings Out Residents

With the temperature records broken by the unusual weather during the past few days Bristol folks yesterday continued to enjoy summer-like atmosphere.

Residents occupied their front porches, motorists were out in force
and flowers were found blooming.

A temperature of 75 degrees Saturday exceeded the former high mark for November 21st in 1900 while yesterday's temperature was 72.5, exceeding the previous record in 1895 by 1.5.

Miss Carolyn Betz, of Edgely, was operated upon last evening at the Harriman Hospital for appendicitis.

RETURNS HOME

WOMAN'S HAND NOW GUIDES OPERATION OF TROLLEY CARS AND BUSES BETWEEN TORRESDALE AND TRENTON, NEW JERSEY

"Service to the Public" is the Motto of Mrs. Carmina Lytle
As She Takes Over Her Duties As Superintendent of Two Transportation Lines — Has Had Experience in This Character of Work, She States in Interview

A few days ago employees of the Trenton, Bristol and Philadelphia Railway Company, were surprised to find a notice posted in the company's offices, to the effect that Mrs. Car-mina Lytle had been appointed as "superintendent of the Delaware River Coach Company and Trenton, Bristol, and Philadelphia Railway Company . . . in charge of bus and trolley operators, and also repairs and maintenance of buses, trolley cars and trolley line."

Mrs. Lytle, the local company's employees find, is a veteran at this sort of "job," and as some have learned
"knows her onions."

At nearly any time of the day or evening she can be found at the bus company's garage at Croydon, poring over her records, inspecting the buses or trolleys, or making out her lists of necessary orders. She is as much at home with a can of automobile grease as with a mixing spoon.

Frequently in past experience, those who have worked with her state, she has brought to the attention of the drivers bruised spots on tires, need of vulcanizing for tires, slight repairs
that were needed on the bus stops that might prevent accidents, and countless other items. "She doesn't miss a thing," is the way a former employee puts it.

Changes that will benefit the public through this public service are looked for with the arrival of Mrs. Lytle.
According to Mrs. Lytle, all of the changes and improvements will not occur at once, but over a period of time, needed improvements being made gradually and as the hoped-for patronage increases.

"We have two new buses which are to be placed in service, and commencing yesterday there will be three buses operated a day," she states in commenting on her work.

This woman who knows what real work is was for the past eight years
connected with the Red Star Bus Lines, Lansdowne. For the first four years she acted in the capacity of secretary-treasurer; and for the past four she was president. While connected with the Red Star Lines Mrs.
Lytle was responsible for the safe and speedy transportation of between 5,000 and 6,000 people per day, not including the 1,300 school children that were transported on the buses night and morning. Two local routes were operated by the Red Star.

"Occasionally people who would watch me do different tasks while at that office would inquire as to what I was," says Mrs. Lytle. "I always answered, 'Chief cook and bottle washer.'"

Her statement that she doesn't take life seriously except that part connected with the operation of her trolley and bus line, is borne out by Mrs.
Lytle's wit which comes to the fore
as she engages in conversation.

That her thoughts are not entirely on the mechanical side of life is shown by her love of flowers. "We may have a flower garden when you come again," she told her interviewer at her office today. "Do you see that metal thing over there, I don't know what you call it; it is the remains of part of a blacksmith's paraphernalia.
Well one of these days when we get things started I'll have that dismantled. Then after it's gilded to look attractive we will plant some bright-

Announce Engagement At Party Given Here

The engagement of Miss Clara Capella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Capella, of 424 Jefferson avenue, to Stanley Miller Vodarski, son of Mr.
and Mrs. Julian Vodarski, of Hayes street, was announced at a party given at the Vodarski home on Saturday evening.

The party was also in honor of the birthday anniversary of Stanley Vo-darski. A delightful evening was spent singing and dancing, which was followed by refreshments.

During the evening Miss Capella and Mr. Vodarski were presented with many beautiful gifts in honor of the occasion. The rooms were prettily decorated with orange and white crepe paper streamers. About 75 guests were present at this party and they were from Bristol, Trenton, Philadelphia and Holmesburg.

The Bristol guests included: Mr.
and Mrs. Charles Capella and family, Mrs. Rose Manze and daughters Annabelle and Carmella, Mrs. Lily Sagola and daughter Miss Julia Sagola, Miss Frances Denny, Mrs. Frank Paletta
and daughter Florence, Mrs. Carmella Falcone and granddaughter Mary Henry, Loupe Ledesma, William Capella, Mrs. Joseph Polunio, Miss Mabel Ciotti, Miss Nellie Ciotti, Mr. and Mrs.
Mama and family, Mrs. Jones, Miss Louise Capella, Jerry Kentsler and Mr. and Mrs. Vodarski and family.

Mrs. Herbert Bennett, of Maple Beach, left today to pay a week's visit to relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y.

colored flowers and have some green vines hanging over the side. Then when people pass they'll know we are actually living here."

A system, which Mrs. Lytle firmly believes is needed for the successful operation of any business, will gradually result. "The main requisites for the drivers of our buses and the operators of our trolley cars are: courtesy, honesty and a knowledge of the bus or trolley." "Cow-boy driving does not go." When asked for an explanation of "cow-boy," the new superintendent told that a "cow-boy" bus operator is "one who steps on the gas and drives like a cow-boy."

"Yes, I find this work fascinating," continued Mrs. Lytle, in telling of her duties. "Of course one doing this work can't keep just as neat as one would like, but the dirt comes off." And to watch this neat-appearing, new superintendent, one can imagine the bus and trolley operators enjoy working with her. Her red hair bespeaks de-

RED CROSS WORKERS REDOUBLING EFFORTS

"Over the Top by Thanksgiving Day" is the Desire of Those Interested

SET A HIGH GOAL

With enrollments in the Fifteenth Annual Roll Call of the Red Cross touching more than eighty-five thousand for Philadelphia and the four Counties of Bucks, Delaware, Montgomery and Chester which comprise the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter, the volunteer workers are now redoubling their efforts to put the membership enrollment "over the top
by Thanksgiving Day."

Their goal is 175,000 members
signed up for the Red Cross in 1932
in the five Counties. Aiding the workers are fifty American Legion Posts in the Chapter territory. Each Commander has advised through Herbert
O. Madeira, Adjutant in Philadelphia County, a report of the work done by the Chapter for disabled veterans during the past ten months from Colonel J. Franklin McFadden, Red Cross
chairman.

This report shows that the increase in the number of applications by ex-service men received and handled by the Home Service Department during the first ten months of the current year totalled $152, an increase of 2,840 over the number of applicants in 1930.

This work involved for the local Red Cross a correspondence with other Chapters and other agencies in the United States and foreign countries amounting to 36,350 letters sent and received. Personal visits made by Home Service workers in the Chapter and the Branch totalled 17,859.

Much of the work was for the purpose of securing Government compensation or insurance for ex-service men who are entitled to it under existing laws. This entailed visits to doctors, employers, comrades and numerous communications with other Chapters to bring the claim a satisfactory conclusion. This work is being done, not alone at the request of ex-service men, but also by request of the American Legion Posts, Veterans Bureau and other agencies.

The Home Service Department as-isted in bringing to a conclusion a total of 1,767 claims for compensation, adjusted compensation, death insurance, insurance for permanent and total disabilities and disability allowance to the amount of $724,264.99.

On October 31st, 1931, the local Red Cross Chapter was handling 4,447 cases of men and families. Of this number 3,628 were disabled men, 329
were in the Army or Navy and 490 required aid of some kind, although not disabled. One-tenth of the cases are now in hospitals.

This service is carried on by the Chapter Home Service Department of which Miss Bessie I. Patterson is Secretary and under the Home Service

LESS HOARDING

Latest reports from the Federal Reserve banks indicate that the money-hoarding pendulum has started to swing the other way. Money is pouring back into the banks at almost as rapid a pace as it was being withdrawn when England's abandonment of the gold standard shattered the confidence of many people in the financial structure of the world.

Before the tide of money circulation changed it was estimated a billion dollars went into hiding in the United States alone. The weekly demand for money at the peak of this period of hysteria was five and one-half billions, and relatively little of that sum was used for meeting business needs. It found its way into old socks, jugs, mattresses and other hiding places.

Money withdrawn from banks is said to be in "circulation." In prosperous times when there is universal confidence in the financial structure it is well to have money in circulation because it finds its way into productive business investment, and stimulates trade. But the "circulation" of late has been theoretical only. Money on deposit circulates more than hoarded dollars.

Evidence that hoarding is diminishing is found in last week's $24, 000,000 drop in money "circulation" and the dropping off of the outflow of gold to the lowest figure in several weeks. Bankers and the government are doing all within their power to bring about a continuation of these movements.

Hoarded dollars will not bring back the good times of 1928. Money that works for nobody hurts everybody.

AIDING THE UNFORTUNATE

It is performing a valuable public service to make clear the fact that the services rendered by agencies of family welfare and their volunteer workers and contributors, as well as the material relief disbursed by them, represent a valuable investment for the community, an investment the dividends from which are shared by every citizen.

When the workers of these agencies visit the families brought to their attention because of illness or unemployment, desertion or other maladjustment, immediate and adequate relief is given when necessary, such as food, fuel, clothing, etc., or the payment of rent. But these visitors do not stop with temporary relief, for their task is to find out what a family may need in order to hold together in the face of some disaster, whether it be medical care for the wage earner laid up by illness, or improved conditions for the children, that their health may not suffer and that they may be kept in school.

Underlying all this work and always in view is the important object of enabling the family broken by misfortune to carry on its own responsibilities, even to the point of helping to find employment wherever possible for its members able to work, or, it may be conserving health and strength so they can hold a job. It is this conservation of the homes of the less fortunate and making them serve their rightful purpose to the children born therein which constitutes the greatest part of the value of organized social work in the community.

CHAPTER XLIX

Frank Severn on the other side of the window!

They had heard no sound of approaching footsteps. It might almost have been a ghost that had suddenly materialized out of the mist-enclosed night, so silently had that figure come—so silent and motionless still, as the white staring face confronted those startled eyes within the room.

Not the Frank Severn whom Jim had last seen two years ago, so terribly changed was that haggard face that the light picked out from the blurred dimness. The features might have been those of a man sleep-walking or moving under the influence of a drug, curiously blank as they seemed of all expression. The eyes with their fixed stare, under the disordered mass of black hair, rested in Jim Wynter as if without the faintest gleam of recognition. The latter's eager cry of his name had brought no trace of any emotion, no change to that strangely marked face.

"Frank—Frank!"
With the cry breaking from him again, Jim, dragging himself out of that first momentary shock of surprise, essayed in a fever of impatient haste to push up the lower ash of the window.

In that same moment the door had been flung open and Sant had burst into the room, startled by that ex-cited cry from within of Frank Severn's name.

HORROR

Almost on the threshold the man paused arrested, his face ghastly and white as paper, as in sudden appalled horror he realized that what Martin had just told was the truth, as he too saw those eyes staring in from the mist outside.

With a queer choking cry Sant seemed suddenly to crumple up. With his hand going spasmodically to his heart, the big burly figure swayed for a moment unsteadily, would have fallen but that there was a chair near into which he dropped. And behind him an ashen-faced Martin, looking as if his nerve were gone, cried out half hysterically as he pointed a shaking hand at the window:

"What did I say? Wasn't I right?"

There was a panic of consternation in his eyes.

In a stride Martell was by his side, gripping the unnerved man's arm warningly.

"Silence, you hysterical fool!" he whispered harshly, with a meaning gleam in the dark eyes bent menacingly on that face of panic. Pull yourself together, man!

It was as had a moment no doubt for Martell as for his two accomplices, this sudden apparition of the victim of their evil plot, Frank Severn, unaccountably broken free, whose first words would be to denounce the guilty men—what, short of a miracle, could save them now?

But even with that grim realization to be faced Martell could still keep his nerve to silence his fellow rogues' panic-loosened tongue.

"What's the matter with this window? It won't open!" cried Jim in angry impatience, as he exerted all his strength to push up the lower sash.

It seemed as immovably unyielding as if it had been wedged on the outside. Bill's added efforts availed nothing. The window remained fast shut.

The figure outside, still with no gleam of recognition of his friends in that face so strangely drained of all expression, had already drawn back out of the radius of mist-blurred light, merged once again into the deep shadows behind that closed about it like a gray engulfing sea, drowning it from sight.

Jim abandoned the attempt to get the window open; he did not risk wasting time on the other window; he raced from the room, followed by Bill Grayson. They ran across the hall, dragged the front door open, and dashed out towards the grounds at the back of the house that the window overlooked.

"I can't understand it," muttered Jim as they ran—"that Frank seemed not to recognize us or to be afraid of us too! It's clear enough now what Martin's words meant—that Frank had escaped from the place where they've been keeping him a prisoner—and that place isn't far from Beggar's Court!"

"Sant's heart's been groggy for some time, no wonder it played him up just now when he saw Severn's face at the window!" Like the writing on the wall for him, said Bill, his mouth grim. "They certainly gave themselves away tonight, he and Martin!"

But where had Severn vanished—and why had he vanished?

"Frank—Frank. This is Jim Wynter. Where are you, Frank?" Jim cried out loudly as they ran 'round the side of the house.

No answering voice out of the baffling darkness. No sign of the man who had come and vanished again like a ghost. No sound of retreating footsteps.

It was bewildering to Jim Wynter and Bill. Why had Severn apparently fled? He had seen his friends here as well as his enemies—must have known that his enemies were powerless now. Jim remembered that strangely vacant face, so changed, so unlike Severn's face; had all the suffering he must have undergone turned his brain for the time? Or since he had found Sant, whom he had trusted, a traitor, did he mistrust even his other friends now?

Then suddenly, as they raced forward, with the thin spectral sea-mist creeping up the estuary to make their search of the grounds an exasperating game of blind man's bluff, a cry broke from Bill Grayson.

"Listen, there's someone there!"

A sudden sound of movement had reached them from somewhere not far away. They ran in the direction whence it seemed to come. Behind them they could hear hurrying following footsteps. Probably Martell's. Martell was the only one of those guilty three who had kept his nerve.

Dimly ahead of them bent out of the thin damp mist a figure began to take shape to their eyes and a voice hailed them, but not Frank Severn's voice:

"Hello, that you, Mr. Wynter?"

It was John Isham. He was standing, supporting himself by his crutches, his head half turned, staring intently into the misty dimness beyond. He was on the path that led 'round by the back of the house to the gate at the side of grounds.

"I thought it must be you, Mr. Wynter, that it was your voice I heard just now," Isham said as they hurried up. "What's all the trouble? And didn't I hear you call out Severn's name? And who was that who dashed past me just now?"

As he was speaking Martell came running up.

"You say someone passed you?" cried Jim. "We saw the missing man Mr. Severn a few minutes ago—"

"Severn?" Isham's voice sounded startled. "It's not a minute ago that someone plunged past me, running as if for dear life. Rather startled me, appearing suddenly out of the mist and nearly knocking me over! I can't say if it was Severn, of course. He was heading in that direction."

Isham pointed. Instantly Jim Wynter and Bill ran on, leaving their informant staring after them.

Martell was pursuing the search too, but he was bearing off in a somewhat divergent direction, as if he preferred to hunt on his own.

A thought suddenly struck Bill.

"Jim, we oughtn't to lose sight of that chap. Martell's an enemy, not a friend! And if he came upon Severn alone. . . . These men are desperate, remember. Martell's one thought might be to silence Severn before he could open his mouth to denounce them. He wouldn't stick at murder! I'd best follow Martell whilst you take this direction."

Faculty News

The faculty of Bristol High School were shocked to hear of the death last week of Dr. Leo H. King, extension teacher from Penn State College.

Dr. King, a graduate of Holy Cross College, had for two years conducted the extension course in education given by Penn State College to the high school teachers of this town; these classes are held every Wednesday afternoon in the Wood Street School.

At the regular session of the class on Armistice Day, Dr. DeLong, the instructor for the grade teachers, told us of Dr. King's illness, which apparently was not serious. Before the end of that same week, however, he was reported dying of double pneumonia. His wife and daughter came by airplane to his bedside.

Dr. King was vitally interested in the subject of education and had performed many experiments and tests in that field.

Dr. DeLong read to us last Wednesday a paper which he had prepared as a memorial to his colleague. He suggested that we undertake the writing of some problem in education in which Dr. King would have been interested, and send it to his daughter Peggy at Christmas time.

Mr. Shoemaker made a motion that resolutions of sympathy be sent at this time to Dr. King's family.

A Great Success!

The Bristol High School play, "Her Song," is nothing but a memory now, as the school settles down to normal once more.

Every year the show is said to be better than ever; this year that statement is especially true. This year's play had more plot, more substance to it, than those of other years. Although those of our audience who went rather slowly, the other two were exceptionally well acted.

All of the principals were good, but it seems to me that Robert Wright in the role of Emil Kronlein, the music master, deserves special attention. He put expression and feeling into his lines and showed good command of his part. George Herman and Josephine Dilisio did well, and of course Arthur Reynolds always provides a number of laughs for the audience.

On the whole, the directress and all those who helped with the play deserve a great deal of credit.

Our Census
If you towns-people are really to know us well, you must have some idea as to our size. Did you know there are 750 pupils in Bristol High School? Of these 450 make up Junior High, and Senior High is composed of the other 300. The ninth grade alone has 212 members.

Aren't you surprised that with so many pupils we can have systematic grouping in classes, assemblies, and the lunch-room, and that the traffic in our halls is not congested? Of course, these things would be impossible if it were not for our Traffic Club and Student Council, which take care of these problems for us just as your policemen and borough council do for you.

Not only do we have a large number of pupils but our faculty is composed of thirty teachers. Three years ago our numbers were so increased that 5 new classrooms were opened. These are all filled to capacity and overflowing. Truly our little community is growing faster than yours! The first graduating class in 1887 was composed of 13 members. The classes graduating in 1931 totaled 58.

As we grow in size, we are growing also in athletics, in social life, and in modern reforms. As a result of this latter development we have the banking system, the honor-point system, and the student-government, modern reforms which place us on an equal rating with the best high schools.

A Thanksgiving Dream

Last night 'neath the light of my lamp I dreamed Of Thanksgiving turkeys; big and brown they steamed; There were sauces, desserts and many side-dishes; The children pulled bones and then they made wishes.

The parents were happy, the children were gay; No hearts filled with sorrow on Thanksgiving Day. 'Twas in a large mansion so stately and grand; That I saw this great feast—while in slumberland.

Somehow the scene changed; New faces I saw; No turkeys were steaming, but foods that were raw; The children were hungry; hearts sad with dismay; Thanksgiving to those kiddies was just one more day.

When I awoke with a start on the morrow—I thought of my dream and those hearts filled with sorrow; Why, in this land of old Uncle Sam—Do some have turkeys, while others have ham?

Let Us Give Thanks

Thanksgiving Day will soon be here. This is the day the nation gives thanks to Almighty God for the benefits received during the year. The first Thanksgiving was celebrated by the Pilgrims when they had their good harvest. They gave thanks to God for all the blessings they had received. This year, with all the unemployment in our country, we still can be thankful that the hand of misfortune has touched us lightly in comparison with other peoples over the earth. We have had no great floods, or natural disasters. Our government is at peace with all the world. There have been no epidemics of any kind, and so far, thanks to the generosity of their fellow Americans, the poor have not greatly suffered.

Regrouping of Classes

Mr. James has asked the Junior High School teachers to divide their classes into two groups. Those pupils in the lower group are required to do just the minimum amount of work. The pupils in the upper group are expected to do work of a higher quality; in addition to this, they are asked to do extra work that requires a little more ability.

The Pilgrims

It was on a cold November morn When the spirit of Thanksgiving was born; At Plymouth Rock they landed safe, So they planned a feast for God's faith.

The Indians brought the stag and deer, This showed their friendship very dear; The Pilgrims brought the cakes and pies; This raised their glory unto the skies.

The Indians told them of weird tales, When they, as boys, had run the trails. And hunted animals at ease, And with great skill had climbed big trees.

For three days and three nights all this went on— On the fourth it ended at the break of dawn; They had thanked their God in the best way they could, And showed that they loved Him and always would.

New Buick Accorded Unprecedented Enthusiasm

"A public reception of almost unprecedented enthusiasm is being accorded the new Buick eight for 1932, according to reports received by the Buick Motor Company from all sections of the country," according to C. W. Winter, local dealer.

Despite the rainy weather prevailing in many parts of the country and the counter-attraction offered by the big football games, attendance at Buick showrooms Saturday, November 14, when the new car was placed on view for the first time, broke all records for a number of years past. A remarkable feature of the first day's showing was the great number of demonstrations of "Wizard Control" requested by the public, one sales zone alone having given over 3,000 by mid-afternoon.

According to Buick officials, this great public interest and welcome for the 1932 Buick is an indication that national prosperity is on its way.

"I feel certain that our new cars are going to help immeasurably in leading the nation from under the cloud of depression which has just started to rise after two years," commented E. T. Strong, president and general manager of the Buick Motor Company. "It is a pleasure to Buick to be able to furnish a real share of the impetus which will bring back prosperity and we feel that we will do that."

Reports from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago, Cincinnati, Buffalo, Rochester, Denver, Kansas City, Lincoln, Neb., St. Louis, Indianapolis, San Antonio, Atlanta, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, Minneapolis and elsewhere all carried the same message of extraordinary attendance on the opening day. The Philadelphia area reported 75,000 attendance, the city proper accounting for 14,000. In the Boston area, the Saturday attendance was 40,800, Los Angeles 49,500, Charlotte, N. C., 29,800. Other zone reports, including some Sunday attendance were: Atlanta 39,962; Cincinnati, 36,962; Cincinnati, 38,893; Detroit, 65,180; Indianapolis, 46,127; Kansas City, 40,807; Oklahoma City, 31,289; and Washington, D. C., 27,950.

"Showrooms crowded," came a wire from Boston. "Without exception the most enthusiastic and beneficial public reception ever known," Philadelphia wired: "Greatest Buick reception in all history. Public enthusiasm and approval surpasses anything ever witnessed here."

"The new Buick is receiving the greatest reception in this territory ever accorded any make of car," came a wire from Cleveland. "The interest manifested by the public is far surpassing that of any previous year. Buick for 1932 is accepted as the outstanding car in the history of the industry."

"Never has there been public enthusiasm and acceptance comparable to that of today," said a Washington message, "not only in Washington, but throughout Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia."

The Buffalo report read: "Showrooms packed with thousands of pleased visitors. All thrilled to see how much Buick gives for the price. This will cause heavy withdrawals of cash from individual strong boxes." Said Lincoln, Neb.: "Public approval far surpasses any previous year in Nebraska and Iowa." Milwaukee reported: "Despite all unfavorable weather, crowds are far beyond our expectations. More interest displayed by public than ever before."

As a result of the public reception, specially in actual sales, before the first day was over dealers were calling upon Zone officials for more cars.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

HOW TO INVERT GLASS OF WATER WITHOUT SPILLING IT

Fill a glass with water and place a piece of heavy paper over the top. The suction of the air in the glass will hold the water in and make it possible to invert the glass without spilling the water. This must be done slowly and carefully. Magicians call this a hydraulic glass and use celluloid instead of paper.

Smart SHOPPING

"How good is it?"

That's it!

ABOUT anything and everything they buy, smart shoppers like to ask one question—"How good is it?"

Chesterfield welcomes smokers who buy their cigarettes that way.

OUR tobacco buyers are smart shoppers, too. They "shop" for the ripest, mildest, sweetest-tasting leaf that grows. And they won't take anything else.

"How good" are Chesterfields? Well, consider their blending.

Blended and cross-blended...not merely mixed together. Blended first by crops and countries... then cross-blended again and again...to produce a flavor and aroma that are Chesterfield's alone.

That's how we get that better taste... that's why Chesterfields are milder. Even the paper they're rolled in is the whitest, cleanest and purest that money can buy.

And the package... clean, bright, fresh-looking... see how easily it opens, yet how tightly it's sealed.

OPEN a package. Note the aroma... delicious foretaste of pleasure ahead.

Now—pull out a Chesterfield... round, firm, well-filled.

"HOW good is it?" Light up... then you tell us!

Milder? Right! Taste better? You bet they do! They're pure, too—and they certainly do satisfy!

Good... they've got to be good! There's value here. We know, because we put it in... and you'll smoke it out with every one you light.

"Sure I shop for cigarettes—Chesterfields satisfy me."

EMERALD HAS BEEN ROYAL GEM SINCE TIME OF NAPOLEON

Precious Stone Favorite With Napoleon As Well As His Sister

By Alice Langelier
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Emeralds have been the favorite jewel of French, as well as other royalty, since the days of Napoleon.

The first Emperor perhaps started the cult when he showered emeralds upon his first Empress.

His sister, Pauline, was also famous for the wearing of the green stone, specializing in jeweled girdles, a fashion that became her very perfect figure. One of her most celebrated girdles, however, was composed of false emeralds, surrounded by real diamonds, a piece which actually cost few francs, but looked worth a million.

Empress Eugenie also was very partial to the emerald and was more than delighted when the City of Paris presented her with an emerald tiara soon after her marriage.

At the Russian court, the Grand Duchess Elizabeth Feodorovna was especially famous for her collection of the green stones, preferring them allied with diamonds and the diamonds framed in silver.

One three-piece set she had made of Columbian emeralds and African diamonds, all remarkable for the alternating scrolls and Empire bows which composed the diadem. This set is now among the Soviet government's carefully guarded treasures, together with the finest known emerald in existence, a stone which weighs 136 carats.

Queen Marie of Jugo-Slavia possesses some of the handsomest cabochon emeralds in the world, the gift of King Alexander upon his wedding day.

No jewels in Paris are more talked about than the lovely emeralds belonging to Ganna Walska, ex-wife of Harold McCormick.

Let Winter Come

Here the charming Peggy Shannon, screen player, proudly displays the latest addition to her winter wardrobe. The suit is of beige cloth and that warm and cozy appearance is given by the trimming of blue fox. The beige chenille turban with its nose-length veil adds piquancy to the distinctive ensemble.

Ex-service men themselves are numerous among those who call at Red Cross headquarters, 2100 Delaney street, Philadelphia, to renew memberships or at booths to sign up.

Among the first to enroll for 1932 are twenty blind persons who have benefited by the activities of the Braille Department which supplies them with transcriptions of reading matter, organized their own little can vass among the sightless.

Youngsters are bringing the careful savings of their banks for the Roll Call and proudly displaying the new Red Cross button that bears the dates "1881-1931" indicating that the organization is fifty years old.

Issued for the 1932 Roll Call is a new window card as a distinctive feature of the half century membership enrollment. These differ from the window flags of former years in color and design and bear the legend "Fifty years of Service to Humanity—1881-1931."

Recently a Captain in the Chestnut Hill district of Philadelphia received an anguished telephone call from a mother in her ward.

"Can your canvasser come to our house before tomorrow morning?" the mother asked anxiously. It was explained that the call could be made early the next morning but the mother said despondently that this would be too late.

"If it is an emergency I will come myself, to sign you up," the Captain said. "But why must it be tonight?"

"Well you see," the mother explained, "before my little boy went to bed tonight he made a wish on the evening star that there would be a new Red Cross window flag at our house before tomorrow. I don't want him to lose his faith in 'is wish or the star."

Needless to say the youngster got his wish, his new window flag, and renewed belief in his star.

termination; her kindly eyes friendliness. Deliberate of manner, Mrs. Lytle thinks before she speaks, and one who engages in conversation with her quickly perceives that she thinks and lives with her buses and trolleys.

"I know a little about the mechanical part of an automobile," she modestly stated, but her conversation with the operators as she checks the details shows her great knowledge of the inside as well as the outside of the buses which she supervises.

"The first year is the hardest in any job," continued the new superintendent, in the resume of her past record. "I soon grew to like this work, and it is indeed fascinating. I try to keep the thought of service to the public uppermost in my mind, and work to that end."

The local bus company is planning to retain the old buses for emergency use, and according to Mrs. Lytle, "when more people ride on our line, we may buy more new buses."

ALUMNI FALLS BEFORE
HIGH SCHOOL ELEVEN

(By Leon Schiffer)

A mighty Cardinal and Gray juggernaut arose in fiery wrath and smote a grim and taut Alumni eleven a deadly blow Saturday afternoon on the local gridiron, when the Bristol High eleven handed a 9 to 0 setback to its Alumni. Over 1000 rabid fans witnessed this thrilling spectacle. Incidentally, Saturday was the inauguration of Alumni Day, a day which it is hoped will be observed throughout the following years.

Although the "Old Grads" clearly outweighed "Ken" Townsend's protégés 40 pounds per man, they lacked the necessary essentials of teamwork, smoothness, and precision. As for the Cardinal and Gray boys, what they lacked in poundage they more than made up in fight.

Coach Townsend's strategy, however, was the savior of the day for the Cardinal and Gray. Starting his second stringers as "shock troops," the Bristol mentor followed this up by relieving them with his regulars after the invaders had been tired out. Let it be said, however, to the latter's credit that the Alumni were not "tagged" until the third quarter.

From the above information we can then gather that both elevens during the first, second, and third quarters put up a "battle royal," slashing and smashing from one end of the field to the other with neither team scoring.

The fourth stanza was the scoring canto of the game. Receiving possession of the oval on their own 5 yard line, the Alumni attempted to punt out of danger. With Spadaccino chosen as the man to "lead them from out of the wilderness," the Alumni quickly massed into their kick formation. However, little reckoned they upon fate. For almost simultaneously with the passing of the ball, Pete Bornice broke through and blocked the kick, the pigskin rolling backwards over the goal line. With the oval nestling quietly on the green grass and with no one in sight, Bornice with an exultant cry of joy threw himself headlong at the ball. However, misjudging his dive, Bornice tumbled and Tranotti, stellar halfback, recovered for the Alumni in the end zone, registering a safety for the Cardinal and Gray.

In the last few minutes of play, the Cardinal and Gray minions again swept their foes relentlessly back for another score. Gaining possession of the pigskin on the invaders' 10 yard line when Britton intercepted Hanson's pass to Spadaccino, the Bristol eleven slowly swung into its offensive attack. On the following play, Cole, on an off-tackle slice, tore off 10 yards of alien territory to score.

Cole converted the extra point on a placement kick.

On Thanksgiving the Cardinal and Gray minions play Morrisville on the latter's gridiron.

"Navy Bill" INGRAM
--HE MADE GOOD WITH A
BANG THIS YEAR AS CALIFORNIA COACH!

© 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved.

HUMAN nature worships the master mind in politics, business, or sport. Hence most fans and critics tend to personify a football team by its coach or a baseball outfit by its manager. You can't think of Notre Dame without Rockne in mind; nor of the Philadelphia Athletics without Connie Mack. It is a virile part of the early teacher-and-pupil relationship that imbues us all with this form of hero-worship. It is just that psychology which makes the master mind (imaginary or real) such a colorful factor in human affairs. Having the M. M. brains-achieve-victory theory in mind—

Tens of thousands have followed with more than usual interest the fate of Notre Dame's football machine this Fall. The great Rockne zoomed to his death in an airplane accident last Spring. Immediately, the general question arose: How will Notre Dame's grid greatness continue without the genius of "Rock"?

Well, the beloved "Rock's" chief assistant, Heartley "Hunk" Anderson has carried on in excellent style. Of course, he has the benefit of a machine that was always shaped for seasons in advance by a master organizer. In addition, if anyone personally knows "Rock's" grid methods, Anderson does. Hence Rockne's old machine moves on with the majesty of yore guided so it would seem by Knute's spiritual hands. Of course, the next few years will tell but, if Anderson still makes good, time will simply reveal the establishment of a Rockne football dynasty at Notre Dame. For "Hunk" was of the late master's own personal "football family." He is well fitted to carry on that Rockne system.

Anderson is in a trying spot during his first year as head coach, but other coaches starting on new jobs this Fall are facing with credit some even more exacting jobs. Eddie Casey's success at Harvard is obvious. And then there's Harvey Harmon. He's done wonders at Penn despite that 49-0 debacle at Notre Dame; so has E. C. Hayes at Indiana; and "Navy Bill" Ingram has... well, some caustic critics do insist he's already done more for California than he did for the Middles years ago. In any event, those Golden Bears are growing claws again. Even their cheer leaders have quit crooning and taken to cut plug since Ingram took charge, hard-boiled critics declare.
